This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE.

The present edition of the Register contains one new feature which needs some explanation,—that of the historical sketch and of the character sketches, with accompanying portraits of many of the deceased members of the faculty. It was at the earnest request of many of the older alumni that these have been introduced. When, after much consideration, it was finally decided upon, it was agreed that there should be no mention made of any who are now living, nor of any deceased who became members of the faculty after 1875, which will account for the omission of the names of some who have done much toward the development and growth of the University. It is the expectation that these sketches shall be a part of a series, which, when taken together, shall record something more than the mere names of those who have done so much to make our University what it has been and now is.

For the first time the alumni of the Law, Music, and Art Schools have had the same attention as the College of Liberal Arts. The result is, perhaps, all that could have been expected, but is far from satisfactory. It is earnestly requested that anyone who may know the facts concerning any deceased, or of the present address of any living, where the address is incorrect or not given, will at once send the same to the editor to be filed for use in the preparation of the next edition. The same request is made in regard to the alumni of the Medical School.

It is hardly necessary to say that every effort has been made to avoid errors and omissions, and to correct any that may have crept into former editions. Acknowledgement is hereby given to those who have responded to requests for information, and to those who kindly prepared the different sketches. Furthermore, it is requested that those interested, either personally or as alumni, will report promptly as they occur, changes of address, obituary notices, changes of name by marriage, academic and other official honors received,—in fact, any information that may properly find a place in this Register.

DEPAUW UNIVERSITY—AN HISTORICAL SKETCH

BY BELLE A. MANSFIELD, A. M., LL. B.

The development of institutions in a state like our own, where they have been a part of the indigenous growth, is always of peculiar interest. Even in the pioneer days in Indiana there was a distinct recognition of needs beyond those for the mere material existence, and the life was known to be more than meat, and the body than raiment. Consequently the most far-seeing men and women, with distinct appreciation and rare devotion, bent the best energies of their lives to bring about the most helpful surroundings, for growth and development, not only within their own homes, but also in their several communities and within the reach of the still wider public. Under this impulse, churches and schools naturally found their places among the homes, the mills, the shops, and the stores of the new communities, and the growing civilization. This soon meant schools for the higher education, as well as those of primary and secondary grade; schools, too, not only under state management and support—but those under religious control as well—where distinct attention should be given to the spiritual growth, at the same time that the intellect was receiving its strictest training and most careful direction. As an outgrowth of this idea, the Methodist ministers of Indiana, in their Annual Conference assembled in 1835, voiced the sentiment of the most progressive, not only of their own numbers, but also of their congregations, when, after long and careful consultation, they drew into a formal resolution this sentiment that had been growing for several years, and adopted it and spread it upon their records—that they would found an institution for higher learning, to be known as "The Indiana Asbury University." This meant much. The state was, as yet, sparsely settled; its roads, where laid out at all, were well nigh impassable; Methodism had only about 25,000 members within the state confines—and money was scarce among them, as it was also among their neighbors; but the need seemed great, energy was at high tide, and faith in the future unbounded. These ministers went from their Conference session, and talked over their new plans with the people of their widely extended circuits.

Several places presented their claims and urged them to be the seat of this new center of learning—prominent among which were Lafayette, Indianapolis, Rockville, Putnamville and Greencastle. After it was once decided that the location should be within Putnam county, the advantageous situation of Putnamville was argued seemingly with propriety and with special force, because it was on that important "National Road" that lead in unbroken distance even from Pittsburg and beyond it westward to the Mississippi river. But notwithstanding this really important factor, the balance of the argument was against it, and the decision was cast in favor of Greencastle. This vote was reached at the Conference session of 1836, which was held in Indianapolis, and on the Saturday afternoon of that occasion. The next Monday morning, Rev. J. C. Smith and Rev. Aaron Wood were appointed agents to collect money for the erection of suitable buildings for this important new enterprise. A committee also was named to memorialize the Legislature at its coming session in the interests of a charter. All the preliminaries were adjusted and work in earnest was about to begin. The first serious opposition was encountered when the committee appeared before the Legislature with their petition—a double line of opposition—from the foes of advancing Methodism, and from those who were opposed to attempting anything more than was already being done in the matter of education under the existing difficulties. But the way was finally cleared—in the lower house, by argument, and in the upper by strategy, combined with the argument; and on the 10th of January, 1837, the charter was granted which provided as follows: "That a seminary of learning shall be, and the same is hereby established in the town or vicinity of Greencastle, in Putnam county, and state of Indiana, to be known by the name and style of 'The Indiana Asbury University,' which shall be founded and maintained forever, upon a plan most suitable for the benefit of the youth of every class of citizens, and of every religious denomination, who shall be freely admitted to equal advantages and privileges of education, and to all the literary honors of said University according to their merit." As yet, it will be noticed, that no maiden was provided for in all this University outlook; her presence was not described even on the university horizon and the "youth" of this charter provision is to have its strict interpretation of being, as the grammarian would say it, of masculine gender.

The claims of this new Institution were presented and urged all over the state, and money came in at least liberally, if not abundantly. A building was begun which was to furnish the "local habitation and the place," and its corner stone was laid amid great ceremony on June 20, 1837. This was the noblest occasion Putnam county had ever yet seen. Twenty thousand people had come from the surrounding country—some of them even from distant parts to witness this important ceremony. All Greencastle was a center of hospitality in the entertainment of its guests. The sermon of the occasion was preached by that splendid orator, Dr. Henry B. Bascom, of Kentucky, who later on became one of the Bishops of the Methodist Church South. All the incidents considered as belonging to such occasions were fully observed, and the men and women went to their homes resolved upon renewed zeal and added sacrifices in the interests of their "University." The Building which was the original of what is now known as "West College," progressed without interruption or serious delay, and was really a noble structure from the standpoint of its times and its surroundings.

But the educational idea did not wait upon its completion. Rev. Cyrus Nutt, of Allegheny College, Pennsylvania, had recently opened a school in Greencastle, which within a few days of the laying of the "corner stone," was adopted as the preparatory school for the "University"; it had its beginning in an old school house, but in November of its first year was moved into a building on the piece of ground now occupied by the College Avenue Methodist Church. The first home of this school was neither spacious nor pretentious—a room of about twelve by fifteen feet, but this was quite large enough for the teacher and his five students—the total enrollment at the opening of the first term; of these five, four were from Greencastle and the remaining one was from a few miles out in the country; their names are carefully preserved and are a part of the records. One-fifth of these charter member students continued his course even to graduation, and was a member of the class of '42—the third class that graduated from the Institution.

Several ineffectual attempts to organize a faculty, were made within the next two years. The trustees, in their wisdom, saw that first class talent must be called and the very best preparation that the church could command; in return they had little but possibilities to offer by way of inducement. During this period, Prof. Nutt—be his name written with reverence, held steadily to his course, and was himself acting president, professor, faculty, treasurer and whatever other offices the duties of the day might demand. With such assistance as he could from time to time secure, he did his work bravely and had the reward of seeing it prosper under his care, and of recognizing the promise of larger things in the times to come.

At a meeting of the Board in 1839, upon the recommendation of Bishop Roberts, whose home was then in Indiana, and of Dr. Charles Elliott, editor of the Western Christian Advocate, Prof. Matthew Simpson, of the faculty of Allegheny College, was elected president; largely through the representations and the urgency of those who recommended him, he decided to accept this important place, and entered upon his duties September 23, 1839. The first regular faculty as then constituted was as follows:

Rev. Matthew Simpson, A. M., M. D.,—President and Professor of Mathematics.

Rev. Cyrus Nutt, A. M.,—Professor of Languages.

Rev. John W. Weakley, A. M.—Principal of Preparatory Department.

John Wheeler,—Tutor in Languages.

Dr. Simpson soon became known as wise in counsel, strong in executive quality and eloquent in speech. He was a statesman, and orator and a consecrated man of God. The new being committed to his care received into its veins some of the rare quality that carried him some years later to the eminent distinction of being recognized as the greatest man in American Methodism, since the days of Bishop Asbury.

His associates in the faculty, too, were men of genuine merit and of unfaltering devotion to their work. All of them became in subsequent years themselves presidents of important educational institutions.

This faculty entered upon its duties in 1839, the school still being located in the old Seminary Building. But at the opening of the second term of that scholastic year, in the spring of 1840, the new structure though not yet completed, was so far advanced that one part of it could be used for school purposes while the remainder was being finished. Work was pushed forward vigorously, both in the classes and with the brick and mortar, in order that by the commencement time, which was to be about the middle of September, everything might be in readiness for a veritable "Commencement," and the looked for day at length arrived. The close of the school year witnessed a great event, the graduation of the first class from the "University," a class of three, of whom Dr. Thomas Goodwin, of Indianapolis, with a long line of useful labors back of him still lives to encourage us with his abounding spirits, to enliven us with his spicy reminiscences and to stimulate us with his enthusiastic activity. He still keeps a clear brain and wields a trenchant pen.

On the 13 of September, Dr. Simpson, who had been busily at work for nearly one year already, was formally inaugurated and the keys of the Institution were placed in his possession by the Hon. David Wallace, the governor of the state of Indiana; this was his official announcement as the first president of "The Indiana Asbury University."

The next day the Board of Trustees took important action, looking toward making larger provisions for the growing needs. The chair of mathematics was separated from the president's duties and Rev. W. C. Larrabee, A. M., then principal of Cazenovia Seminary, was elected professor of mathematics and Natural Science—but was soon relieved of the latter half of this combination to take charge of which Charles G. Downey, A. M., was elected. The chair of languages, too, was divided—its former incumbent retaining the Greek, his tutor, Rev. John Wheeler, A. B., being elected to the chair of Latin language and literature. The president also organized the department of mental and moral science and took charge of its classes in addition to his official duties as the head of the institution,

The Faculty was now considered quite complete, and was, indeed, under all the circumstances one of remarkable strength. Only one change and one addition were made in its composition for the liberal arts work, until the end of what is sometimes called the Simpson period; the change was incident to the resignation of Prof. Nutt and the succession of the elegant and enthusiastic Prof. B. F. Tefft, A. M., from the state of Maine. The retiring professor, however, returned a few years later to serve through another period of years in connection with the Faculty here, and then in the Faculty of a neighboring institution in our own state. The additional name placed in the teaching list was that of the accomplished scholar, Rev. S. K. Hoshour, A. M., who in 1847 was elected as Tutor to take charge of the new work in German and French. In July 1848, President Simpson, with his work in full tide of prosperity, resigned his place to accept the editorship of the Western Christian Advocate, to which position he had been recently elected. He had been at Asbury about ten years; during that time it had grown from its small beginnings, though with a large enough name, surely, to the status of a really prosperous and well known college. From the first, its educational standards had been placed high, and its corps of instruction was from among the best scholars and thinkers that the country could furnish. This meant very much, not only for those days and years, but for those that have followed even down to the present; and it will mean much for the subsequent times—not only in the records that are back of us and the traditions that are about us, but in the impulse under which we shall continue to live and grow.

Students, too, came in goodly numbers—as many as under the existing conditions could be well cared for; and these not only from our own state, but a liberal proportion from adjoining states and even more distant regions—recognizing that here was a place to gain an education of a high order, and to gain it under the advantages of broad healthful, christian surroundings. The best educational interests here subserved, and the importance of christian influences was emphasized.

During the year that followed the resignation of Dr. Simpson, while the Board was trying to find a successor who would exactly suit the conditions and the needs—the administration was placed in the hands of Prof. Larrabee, and the standards were well maintained during this interim.

July 14, 1849, Rev. Lucien W. Berry, A. M., was chosen president and entered very soon afterward upon the duties of his official position. He was pre-eminently an orator; one of the most brilliant pulpit orators of his time—and withal a man of learning. He came to the new field of labor with the confidence of his brethren and the strong support of the church. His formal inauguration took place at the next commencement time, nearly one year after he commenced his work; the keys of the University were placed in his charge by the chief executive of the state, Governor Wright. He continued to administer the affairs of the Institution for four years longer, and at the end of that time resigned his place here, and accepted the presidency of the Iowa Wesleyan University at Mt. Pleasant.

In the following August, the Rev. Daniel Curry, D. D., of New York City was elected to the vacancy; he began his work with the opening of the school year and remained until July 1857, a period of about three years. Dr. Curry was a superior teacher, a man of fine native ability and extensive culture, but not quick to assimilate the spirit of the west into his eastern life and habits; nor was he, perhaps, always wise in government. Passing by entirely what may have been the merits of the case, it is matter of history that during these years arose the college rebellion that threatened such dire things to the school. So serious did the conditions become that a special session of the Board of Trustees was called in December, 1856, to adjust the differences between faculty and students that seemed incapable of easier adjustment. During this session the resolution was presented and adopted discouraging, as a general principle all appeals from students to the Board of Trustees as against faculty action. But at the end of the school year, the president decided that perhaps the interests of all concerned might be best subserved by a change in administration. He resigned his place and enjoyed many years of successful labor in other fields—the greater part of the time as editor of some of the most important periodicals under the control of Methodism.

From July 1857 to July 1858 the Institution was again without an executive head. At this time Dr. Nutt was again elected to a professorship, after an absence of a number of years, and was also made vice president. With this arrangement a successful year ensued and at the close of it Rev. Thomas Bowman, D. D. was elected to the presidency. He brought with him into his work, a beautiful spirit and a thorough education. Upon his coming, the school people and the general public rallied about him and the fourteen years of his administration were fourteen good years. There was genuine progress in those times and a good degree of peace on earth, good will among men. In 1872 he resigned the place which he had held through so many and such successful years, because the church in its wisdom had transformed the college president into a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Rev. Reuben Andrus, D. D., at that time pastor of Meridian Street Church in Indianapolis, was chosen as his successor, and continued in the place for three years; he was a strong preacher and a noble hearted man whose presence even impressed people toward the better things. He came to his new work in days of its prosperity and after three faithful and successful years concluded to return to the work of his choice in the regular pastorate.

Rev. Alexander Martin, D. D., was the choice for the next president. He was a Scotchman by birth and had the true fiber of his own strong, rugged country. He was a born ruler and an able organizer. Dr. Martin came to Asbury in 1875, with ripe and broad scholarship and with firm conviction of right, which he carried out without fear or favor. He knew what a University ought to be, and furthermore knew that the one to which he was called was only an excellent college; he believed though, that the time had come to extend its circle of usefulness, and to make it in fact what it had all along been in name. To this end he labored and with how large degree of success is well known, till he saw Asbury enlarged and itself the Liberal Arts School of DePauw University, with beginnings at least of all the special and professional schools that usually enter into the constitution of a university, excepting only that of medicine. In 1889, he feeling that, with advancing years, he should be relieved from the heaviest of his responsibilities and the most arduous of his duties, his resignation as president, offered for the second time, was finally accepted and his active duties in the University were allowed to remain only in connection with his department of philosophy—at which post he continued until the end of his long and useful life in 1893.

After much consultation in the matter of the next presidency, Rev. J. P. John, D. D., was chosen in 1889. He was already one of the University professors and the Institution's vice president. He was thoroughly acquainted with the life about him and in full sympathy with the course of development of the last few years. With his strong logical mind and his enthusiastic nature he recognized large possibilities in the very near future, and bent his energies toward them. He devoted himself assiduously to the reorganization of the courses of study, and to the looking out professors of the highest available quality in their own lines of work, so that whenever a change had to be made in the faculty, or an addition could be made, it might always be the best one possible in the interests of the highest order of work in all departments. These were the days when the University expectations were at their greatest as regarded the value of its endowments and large things seemed to be within the reasonable reach of the Institution. But hard times came this way in '93 and continued through several subsequent years. Business interests suffered; stocks and shares declined in value; productive funds became non-productive; student numbers decreased because incomes in their homes were uncertain, and the horizon of present possibilities narrowed and that beyond the power of any one to prevent it. Many a man and many an institution during those years had to exchange its inquiry of "what is best" for the more available one of "what is now most expedient." But a high order of work was done in recitation rooms, libraries and laboratories, and young men and young women were learning to think, and were getting ready for the great world. Dr. John resigned the presidency in 1896 and was followed by the present incumbent Rev. H. A. Gobin, A. M., D. D., who for some years previous had been the dean of the school of Theology. He has shown himself to be a man among men for the time in the midst of which he has been placed, and has answered with rare discretion the best interests of the University, and brought it through the severest days of its financial difficulties, till the dawn of a new era of prosperity appears on its horizon. And now the church and the general public are expecting large things at his hands and a new epoch of forward movement. During these recent times, even when needs have been the most urgent and money has been at its greatest scarcity, the worst that could ever be fairly said was that the Institution was financially embarassed, for always the standards have been kept high, the numbers in attendance have been large enough for the resources at hand, first class work has been done, and a rare spirit of loyalty and college enthusiasm has prevailed among faculty and students.

Within these fifty two years, and under these seven administrations that have followed since the times of the first president, professors, associates, instructors and tutors have come and gone—many of them of noble quality and a high degree of efficiency in their several departments. Nor has it always been in their departments alone that they have rendered inestimable and imperishable service; for some have been wise and careful counsellors as well, and have touched for healing and for health the young life about them; some, too, have contributed bountifully toward the solutions of the weightiest problems that have presented themselves through these years, for university solution, and have planned and worked with zeal and efficiency for enlarging interests and advancing opportunities. But there are too many of them whose merits place them in honored ranks in the educational world, even to be named and titled in the brief pages of this historical sketch; but they are carefully registered in the subsequent pages of this volume.

Many interesting things present themselves as worthy a place in the records of these passing years, but naturally we can stop here to make mention of only a few of them, so these few must be selected from among those that are conspicuous as record making ones:

On the 23 of May, 1843, the trustees entered into compact with the secretary of war to educate ten Choctaw boys, and pursuant to this agreement Indians came into the school. At first it seemed peculiar but was entirely consistent with the provisions of the charter as was also the coming in at later times of Japanese, Africans and Chinese.

In the July meeting of the Board of Trustees in 1846, a department of law was created; but little however was done with it until 1853, when it was organized for regular work. It has had a fitful career, sometimes of activity and sometimes of inactivity; at this present writing, if in existence at all, it is in a state of suspended animation; altogether it has had an active life of nearly twenty five years—and during these years much really excellent work has been done. Able professors have been in its faculties and able students have gone out from its classes.

In November, 1848, "Indiana Central Medical College" was organized at Indianapolis and made a department of the University; it had a prosperous career extending through four years; three classes, aggregating forty members, were graduated from it. But though these beginnings seemed full of promise the Board of Trustees concluded that they had been premature in so large an additional undertaking and withdrew support and sanction from the young school.

Hon. James Whitcomb, in 1853, gave the University his valuable library of 4,500 volumes, and made provisions for its supervision and enlargement. This furnished a very considerable nucleus for the accumulations of all these years. The regular income from the endowment which he left for it is still one of the important sources of revenue for the purchases of new supplies from year to year.

In 1859 it was considered expedient to re-organize the departments, and this was done under the following eight titles—each member of the Corps of Instructors fitting in some one of these groups.

I. President, and Professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy.
II. Vice President, an Professor of Mathematics.
III. Professor of Natural Science.
IV. Professor of Greek Language and Literature
V. Professor of Latin Language and Literature.
VI. Professor of Belles Lettres and History.
VII. Adjunct Professor of Mathematics and Principal of Preparatory Department.
VIII. Professor of Law.

This new classification, in itself, made no changes in the work about the Institution, or in the respective duties of the various persons concerned, but merely set forth in more systematic order facts that had been thrown into more or less of confusion by many adjustments and readjustments.

The year 1867 witnessed a real innovation; after careful consideration and protracted discussion, it was decided in June, that ladies should be admitted to the College classes. This was a great departure from the old standards; the mixed student contingent had as yet appeared in but very few of our Colleges—notable among this few were Oberlin College and the Iowa Wesleyan University. With the opening of the next school year, a number of young women availed themselves of the privileges for higher education, and in 1871 four young women were in the graduating class.

In 1869, Robert Stockwell having given $25,000 to the endowment funds—which then seemed quite a munificent gift, the chair of Greek was named in his honor "The Robert Stockwell Chair of Greek Language and Literature."

But naturally amid all the growth and expansion of the times, the one building that had been so ample in its first years was entirely too small to meet even tolerably well the present needs. An additional building must be erected and that in the near future. After much deliberation, with but little money for it in hand and not much more in sight, but with large faith in the possibilities, the work was undertaken, and on the 20th of October, 1869, the corner stone was laid for a new building—the one now known as East College. The work progressed but slowly, for the Trustees and the Building Committee were not willing to go much in advance of the ready money for the payment of the bills; so that about six years passed by before the structure was completed, though parts of it were ready for occupancy before that time. When it was finished it was at a total cost of something more than one hundred thousand dollars. Quite a number of its rooms were finished, furnished and named by private individuals, and the spacious chapel was beautifully finished by Mr. Jesse Meharry, and named in honor of his wife "Meharry Hall."

In 1877 a Department of Military Science was established. It was organized and considerably advanced in drill through the generous and unrecompensed labors of Major C. W. Smith, of the class of '67, and Major M. Masters, both of Indianapolis, but an officer of the regular army was soon afterward secured, and the department was maintained without interruption until the outbreak of the recent Spanish war, which called in for the active service the officers and the guns. A Department of Physical Culture has for the present superseded it.

In 1879 laboratories were first opened for science work; prior to this time, these studies had been pursued from the text book with occasional experiments made by the teacher in the presence of his classes; with this new era, the student was sent into the laboratory to conduct his own investigations and make his reports. The chemical laboratory was opened first, to be followed soon by the physical, and a little later by the biological.

On February 10, 1879, the old College building was nearly destroyed by fire. A little later it was rebuilt, enlarged and refitted—not at all a thing of beauty in its present state, but spacious and useful.

Eighteen hundred and eighty-two witnessed two marked actions of the Board of Trustees—the first one the election of Prof. Alma Holman, A. M., to the Chair of Modern Languages, the first lady called to a full professorship in the Institution; the second one the establishment of the Department of Theology, to which Rev. S. L. Bowman, S. T. D., of New Jersey, was called as the head.

On May 5, 1884, there came to a happy termination the series of negotiations that had been in progress for nearly three years, and that resulted in the change from "Indiana Asbury University" to "DePauw University," with the beginnings of all that it has meant in the way of strengthening and of enlargement. For the details of these important transactions reference must be made to the fuller records of the University. Suffice it here to say that important financial interests were subserved, by which the Institution received $60,000 from Greencastle and Putnam county, $120,000 from the Indiana Conferences and friends outside of Putnam county, and from Hon. W. C. DePauw, the liberal bequests, which, notwithstanding the vicissitudes of subsequent years, have netted the Institution already about four hundred thousand dollars with settlements yet to be made within the near future that, according to most conservative estimates, will amount to about an additional one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Also, pending these negotiations, arrangements were completed for several other important enterprises prominent among which was the building and equipment of our excellent McKim Observatory entirely at the expense of him whose name it bears. And this is in the line of advancement which has long been in progress. From the early beginning of the University down to the present time, friends have come forward with generous gifts to meet the pressure of special difficulties or to open the way for important advances that could not otherwise be made. Indeed the Institution has never been wanting in friends who have been willing to labor, to plan, and even to sacrifice in its behalf. This has been one element of its vitality and its strength. Rooms and corridors, libraries and alcoves are eloquent in their tributes, and the names and generosity of numbers of these earnest and devoted friends and helpers are among the most sacred of the records of these years.

With the new possibilities that opened with the coming in of these larger amounts of money of the past sixteen years the opportunity seemed at hand for realizing in fact the name of "University," and several new schools were projected and formally opened; so that by the year 1886 the following schools were in operation, and so continued for several years:

The Asbury College of Liberal Arts.
School of Theology.
School of Law.
School of Military Science.
School of Music.
School of Art.
Normal School.
Preparatory School.

In 1890 it was deemed wise to elect a Professor of Pedagogy into the faculty of the Asbury College of Liberal Arts rather than to maintain a separate Normal school—not because of any difficulty in maintaining the latter, but because more in harmony with the educational idea about a University.

In 1894, from lack of funds that could appropriately be used in developing the Law School into what it really should be, it was thought best by the Board of Trustees to suspend it at least for a time, and in 1899 similar action, for reasons partly similar, was taken in regard to the School of Theology, and a professorship of Biblical Literature was added in the Liberal Arts Department.

In 1896 the name "Preparatory School" was changed to "Academy," in order that the work done there might be more exactly designated. With these changes the several schools continue.

Incident to the enlargement of the Institution in these recent years several new buildings have been added; at present the buildings are as follows: East College, West College, Science Hall, McKim Observatory, Woman's Hall, Music Hall, Art Hall and Florence Hall—the last named of which is the most recent one, and was built through the bounty of Mrs. DePauw and Miss Florence DePauw. An additional building to be devoted to chemistry and physics is just begun; it is expected to cost about fifty thousand dollars—the generous and timely gift of Mr. D. W. Minshall, of Terre Haute.

In 1884 the office of Chancellor was created and Bishop Bowman was elected to fill that office. And though it was without specified duties and without salary, it has been by no means a mere empty name—for our Chancellor has always meant very much to us and his abounding interest and his timely visits have always been an inspiration and a benediction about the Institution. During these last two years his exact title has been "Chancellor Emeritus," merely that the former designation might be used for an active officer out in field who should be one of the regular staff of workers. This position is now held by Rev. W. H. Hickman, D. D., a man of large business ability and boundless energy, who pushes with vigor the business affairs of the University; he is now in the interest of adding $500,000 to the permanent endowment fund of the University, and looking after the affairs of the new building that is just under way.

And now this sketch has reached one of the most important factors of University life and University connection—the Alumni and other former students of all these years from the beginnings even unto this present time; these men and, in more recent years, these women, too, whose lives have been to so large an extent, molded and directed under its influence. After all this is one of the true tests of the value of an Institution of learning its permanent influence on the lives and character under its influence, and under this test, there are no words or sentences that can adequately express what Asbury and DePauw have meant and are still meaning in Indiana and more distant parts of our own country and even of other lands. There is already a graduate list of near two thousand and that still longer list of those who have pursued longer or shorter courses of study under these same influences, but who for various reasons stopped short of their completion. Among these graduates and others whose lives have been largely moulded and directed here, are many conspicuous and able leaders—Divines, Lawyers, Doctors, Auditors and Editors, Diplomats, Statesmen and men of affairs—men and women, whose lives enrich the communities in which they live and help to establish and maintain noble ideals in life and to press toward them. We shall not name them here, but the greater part of this volume is devoted to the Alumni of the Institution, and to such facts concerning their lives as are significant and of public interest.

DePauw University enters upon the new century with sixty-one years of noble and honorable life back of it, with a record that contains the accounts of some serious struggles, but all of them leading to ultimate victories, with vigorous energy in its present life and firm in faith for the coming years. It is rich in its traditions and in the sacrifices that have been made for it; rich in its Alumni and non-graduate students, and its noble and many friends within its own church and outside of it; rich in its students and in the spirit within its halls and walls; and rich in the prospects toward which it is moving.

MATTHEW SIMPSON, D. D., LL. D.

PRESIDENT, 1839-1848.

(Born in Cadiz, Ohio, June 20, 1811. Student at Madison (now Allegheny) College, and studied medicine; entered Pittsburg conference; 1837, professor of Natural Science and Vice-President of Allegheny College; 1839, elected president of Indiana Asbury University; 1848, elected editor of Western Christian Advocate; 1852, elected Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Died. June, 1884.)

Bishop Simpson was in appearance and in reality a Saxon nature strongly tinctured with Celtic qualities. The rugged form and reddish hair reminded one of the Scottish Highlander; the shrill but powerful voice thrilled the nerves like the tone of the bagpipe, while its peculiar and plaintive cadences stirred one easily to tears. He was Celtic, too, in the vividness with which he conceived the scenes that he described, and in the lyrical delight with which he portrayed them. But he was Saxon in his self-restraint and self-command, in his firm grasp of fact, in his eagerness for actual and permanent results, in his recognition of real difficulties in the minds of his listeners, in the breadth and frankness of his reasoning, in the simplicity of his language and of his illustrations. . . . He spoke to his hearers like one reading their thoughts, anticipating their objections and beating back their difficulties; he spoke to them, also, as one having authority, as one confident of his right to control their destinies by his persuasive speech, as one confident of the value of the experience into which he would carry them by the sweep of his own soul. For the Celtic-Saxon was transfigured in such moments with celestial power.

CHARLES J. LITTLE, D. D.

Matthew Simpson was one of the kindliest of men, easily approached, and frank and generous in his sentiments. Feeling the deepest sympathy with his fellow-men in their weakness and error, he cultivated toward all the broadest charity. No one ever sought his aid in any way but received every help he could afford him. Though full of general and very accurate knowledge, and possessed of the most decided opinions, he never asserted them in an authoritative way. He was so self-restrained and modest that some in the early years, before they came to know him better, thought him timid and irresolute. They soon learned that he was a man of invincible courage. In fact there never lived a more inflexible and determined man in the execution of a purpose and plan which was the outcome of his matured convictions.

C. G. COMEGYS, M. D.

In his home Bishop Simpson was sunshine. Behind the dazzling, imposing front of his public and official fame, lay a heart as simple, genuine and pure as that of a little child; inside a manhood sturdy as Gladstone's, a gentleness like Florence Nightingale's. Though subject to numerous illnesses, he had great endurance, elasticity and resilience. Coming home weary from long and laborious absences, he would quickly rebound, and the grateful joy of being at home exhilarated him sometimes into a blitheness of spirit which played like fountain-brilliance in the house. Even in his last sickness the sufferer would let loose a sweet genial playfulness, doubtless to lighten the heavy anxiety on loving faces around his bed. A watcher at his bedside one day, during his last illness, noticing his moving lips, listened and heard: "Candidati ascendant. Auctoritate mihi commissa—." His mind was forty years away and he was conferring degrees from the Commencement platform at Greencastle.

WM. V. KELLEY, D. D.

LUCIEN W. BERRY, D. D.

PRESIDENT, 1849-1854.

Lucien W. Berry, one of the distinguished educators in the West, was born in Alburg, Vermont, in 1815. In 1838, he was admitted into the Indiana Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He filled, with great popularity and usefulness, a number of the most prominent appointments. In 1849, he was elected president of the Indiana Asbury University, where he continued until 1854, when he was elected president of the Iowa Wesleyan University, at Mount Pleasant, where he remained about three years. In 1857, he resigned his presidency in Iowa to take charge of an incipient educational institution at Jefferson City, Missouri.

Dr. Berry was a profound scholar, an orator of uncommon power, and eminently a holy man. In every department of the church he showed his devotion to all its interests, and was diligent and faithful in every trust. Among the last words which he ever wrote was a message to his brethren of the Missouri Conference, saying: "Tell my brethren of the Missouri Conference to push the battle to the gate, and God will be with them." He died in Cincinnati, July 23, 1858.—Simpson's Cyclopedia of Methodism.

DANIEL CURRY, D. D., LL. D.

PRESIDENT, 1854-57.

(Born near Peekskill, N. Y., November 26, 1809; graduated from Wesleyan University, 1837; principal Troy Conference Academy, 1837; professor in Georgia Female College, 1839; entered Georgia conference in 1841; transferred to New York conference, 1844; president Asbury (DePauw) University, 1854-57; New York conference, 1857-64; editor Christian Advocate, 1864-76; editor Ladies' (after National) Repository, 1876-80; pastorate, 1881-84; editor Methodist Review, 1884-87. Died, August 17, 1887.)

Dr. Curry came of Scotch-Irish ancestry, and his tall, rugged form and almost sombre face, with its square forehead, deep-set eyes, with overhanging, shaggy brows, firm mouth and square chin, made him known for what he was,—a man who would think out conclusions for himself and then maintain them regardless of opposition. To those who knew him chiefly through his writings and debates, the combative seemed the predominant feature in his disposition, but to those with whom he was intimate, or who met him in the social circle, there was a brighter side. He was the life of any social circle in which he happened to be and his conversation would sharpen the wits of any who heard or talked with him, if their wits were capable of taking an edge.

After his death, Dr. J. M. Buckley wrote of him (Christian Advocate, Aug. 25, 1887): "Dr. Curry, though classically educated, was pre-eminently a reading, thinking, observing man, rather than technically a scholar. His mental energy, sustained without apparent diminution to the last, betokened the soundness of his ancestral inheritance, the regularity of his physical habits, and the continued and easy play of his thinking faculties. While not narrow, he was intense, and impulsive, and his more conspicuous infirmities (for what man that liveth is free from infirmity?) arose from those qualities. Yet was his passion rather intellectually combative than malignant, and his prejudices often melted themselves where strokes had but hardened him."

Another who knew him well, said: "He was not accustomed to evade responsibility, although assuming it cost him dearly at times. The man who surrendered to him without debate never won either his respect or his affection. He loved most many of the men who proved their mettle by attacking or resisting him. His heart was open to any honest approach, but the front door to it was through his head."

The part of his life work of most interest to us, however, is fitly described by Bishop Goodsell, in the Methodist Review (Nov., 1887), where he says: "As a college president his career was short and eventful. He had not yet sufficiently softened to make the young his allies, and to command by delicate use of his power the eager assistance of his compeers. No one doubted that he intended to bring his best endowments to tne institution of which he was the head. But his mental tone just at this period was least fitted to the delicate task of a college president. Later on in life the young thought him an oracle and a friend. Dr. Cur ry was both when neither was helpful in the work he had to do."

REUBEN ANDRUS, D. D.

By Henry J. Talbott, D. D., Class of '73.

(Born in Rutland, New York, January 29, 1824; parents soon moved to Fulton county, Ill., where he worked on a farm till 1845; graduated from McKendree College; entered Illinois conference in 1850; organized classes of Illinois Wesleyan University; alternated between the pulpit and class-room until elected president of Asbury (DePauw) University in 1872; resigned in 1875 and remained in pastorate until his death, January 17, 1887.)

Dr. Andrus came to the presidency of the institution at the opening of a transition period, both in the history of the University itself and in the work of higher education as provided for by the State. He was the successor of men of commanding abilities and power. The days of Simpson and Bowman were thought of as golden days in the history of the institution which they had served with conspicuous efficiency. That his presidency, under all the conditions prevailing, should have barely reached respectability would have been highly creditable to him; that it went far beyond this must be set down as an evidence of his uncommon capability. In truth, during his comparatively brief occupancy of the post of leadership, he administered the affairs of the institution with marked ability and unsurpassed devotion. It must be said that he lacked the vivid imagination and unexcelled oratorical power of Simpson; nor could he be ranked as a peer of Bowman in the possession of a simple, clear, smooth style of discourse that was always easily understood and was universally captivating; nor yet could he be classed as the equal of Martin in profound scholarship and unrivaled executive ability; but in the power to discern the needs and the great mission of the University, and to forecast the conditions under which its high mission might be wrought out, and in his fidelity to the trust committed to him, he was not second to his eminent predecessors and successors in the presidency.

Holding himself to a high ideal of personal effort, being himself a hard student, never being willing to spare himself in labor or sacrifice for the cause he was set to represent, it goes without saying that he would be inclined to hold students to a high grade of work, and that he would expect much from his associates in the faculty. Perhaps he expected too much from his associates in the teaching force, and on this account something of harmony in that body may have been forfeited.

In manner genial, frank, and brotherly, he was yet no trifler; but was ever serious and earnest. He was in every way a forceful man. In his prime he was of rugged, powerful frame, with great powers of endurance. His mind was keen, incisive, and severely logical. He was not a ready platform speaker; nor had he a distinctively popular style of public address. He was argumentative rather than rhetorical, and therefore in sermon and address his message was to the thoughtful and considerate; his appeal was to the reason, and scarcely at all to the imagination. He ministered but little to mere entertainment, but stirred to careful thinking.

Blameless in personal life, with high ideals, unflagging in energy, always standing for personal and civic righteousness, a powerful preacher, he strongly impressed those whom he met in private and in public—and always for good. Dr. Andrus fairly won a worthy place beside the distinguished men who have faithfully and ably presided over the affairs of our University.

ALEXANDER MARTIN, D. D., LL. D.

By William Riley Halstead, D. D., Class of '71.

(Born in Nairn, Scotland, January 24, 1822; came to America in 1836; learned the tanners trade; worked his way through Allegheny College, graduating at the head of his class; principal Northwestern Virginia Academy; professor of Greek, Allegheny College; pastor, Wheeling W. Va.; organized and first president of West Virginia University; president of Indiana Asbury and DePauw University; delegate to four General Conferences and to the First Methodist Ecumenical (London) and the Centennial (Baltimore) conferences. Died, December 16, 1893, while still professor of Philosophy in DePauw.)

No sufficing record of the life-work of Alexander Martin has yet been made. So subtile were the elements of greatness in him that it would be difficult for a writer to set them forth. There were felt potencies of spirit always going out from him, so very fine featured that the gross forms of language would rarely express them. Not to know him intimately, was to have small knowledge of his rare personality. He was so quiet, so reserved, so reticent, so utterly free from exploiting his scholarship, that many mistook these qualities for diffidence and lack of confidence in his own powers. But he never failed on occasion. He was not the orator in the ordinary sense, like Andrus, or Bowman, or Simpson; he was the teacher and the college president. In these respects he had no superior in the church. He came to Indiana a stranger to her people, but he soon won his way to public confidence, and the people were made to feel that the executive interests of the University were safe in his hands. They saw and felt his sturdy Scotch integrity, and they believed in him. His fourteen years of work as president of the University were years of hope and swift expansion. In all ways, they will compare favorably with the terms of other great names who have held the same place. The courses of study were made more symetrical, the sphere of the institution was extended, and large contributions of money showed the appreciation, faith, and hope of its friends.

While in the wholeness of his work he was not inferior to any, in administrative ability he had talent of the highest order. In a remarkable way he united mildness with firmness. To his yes, and no, there could be but one definition. With a few students, who had never known discipline, he was occasionally out of favor, but the approval of God was on his work and the memory of his presidency is clean and healthful. As an educator he has done a work in Methodism which will never allow his name to be overtaken by oblivion.

Dr. Martin was a man of pure intent. He had an unselfish spirit. He took no short ways to accomplish personal ends. He had prudence and courage. He had definiteness of character. He had a wholesome and clean mind. He never compromised his own convictions. He was firm and yet reasonable. His sturdy nature was streaked with iron and tempered by the spirit of God. A sense of the divine went with him and came out from his presence. The faith of his Highland ancestry was in him so strongly that his very silence was a defense of religion. He had holiness without cant and without hypocrisy. In an intimate acquaintance of years, we never knew in him a single personal impropriety. And yet he was unlike any other man. In the passing of years, Dr. Martin's character and work are being more and more appreciated.

CYRUS NUTT, D. D., LL. D.

BY THOMAS A. GOODWIN, D. D., CLASS OF '40.

(Born in Trumbull county, Ohio, in 1814; graduated from Allegheny College in 1837; the first teacher, and principal of Preparatory Department, Indiana Asbury University; president of Fort Wayne College one year and of Whitewater College five years; twice, again, professor and vice-president in Asbury University; last fifteen years of his life, president of Indiana University. Died, August 1875, in Bloomington, Indiana.)

Dr. Nutt was a profound scholar and a wise manager of the infant University whose doors he was the first to open. He entered upon his literary career too late in life to take up everything that now enters into a broad education, but in the branches of education which entered into the college curriculum of his period, there were few if any more thoroughly prepared to teach. To his accuracy in detail, he added a rare aptness to teach and a patience in research in his particular field that endeared him to all who came in touch with him. His rare executive abilities were more fully developed later when president of the Indiana University. It was through his tact and management that that institution became the exclusive ward of the State. As a preacher, he was clear, methodical and instructive, but never emotional. His life work was an educator, and as such he had few superiors in his time.

JOSEPH TINGLEY, A. M., Ph. D.

BY ELIJAH E. EDWARDS, A. M., PH. D., CLASS OF '53.

(For items of life-work, see Alumnal Register.)

Joseph Tingley was a man of rare and versatile genius, accomplished in many arts. He was an accomplished artist, a fine musician, a skillful mechanician, a thorough scientist, a popular lecturer on scientific subjects, a painstaking teacher, and a tireless worker. In the earlier days such versatility and power of working were of great service, and he always used his varied gifts in the interests of his department and of the University. President Martin, in his memorial address, said truly: "There have been men in all ages naturally fitted for and providentially called to the work of teaching. This was eminently the appointed and appropriate place for our departed friend, Joseph Tingley." The best evidence of his calling may be found in the advancement of his students, many of whom have become eminent scholars and scientists. These revere his memory as one who opened to them the gates of a new world, and inspired them with zeal and enthusiasm for the work of life before them. Dr. Spaulding, of the class of '54, writes: "Dr. Tingley was a man to be loved and honored; a man of fine presence, high quality of nature, lofty aspirations, marked dignity of character and of sweet spirit, a person of singular equipoise of faculties, with a genius for scientific investigation and inventive insight, refined in manners, a cultured Christian gentleman, with a warm heart and a deep and broad soul." As such he will be remembered.

JOHN CLARK RIDPATH, LL. D.

John Clark Ridpath was a great teacher. His talents as an instructor entitled him to rank high even among the few greatest teachers of his time. To his alert intellect, gifted alike with historical imagination and a scientific aptitude for a study of the general principles governing the movements of society, history was a living and not a dead thing. By his enthusiasm, his vivid conceptions, he filled his pupils with undying ardour for historical study. He often declared that Guizot was his great master, to whom he owed everything. When he forsook the class room in order to devote himself exclusively to literature, he carried into his new field his old methods. He wrote for the people. In clear, vivid, nervous language he re-wrote history in a popular form. He was still the instructor. He wrote not only of facts but of the relations of facts, not only of the externals of society but of the internal movements. He taught the philosophy of history in such a plain way that the people, the masses, were interested and understood it.

He was distinctly a part and product of the great democratic movement of society in the Nineteenth Century. He took his place in the march of democracy among those who strove to make science democratic, to extend knowledge from the narrow circles of scientific specialties and trained students until it should be possessed by average men and women. With him the love for his fellow man amounted to a passion. He believed not only in liberty, but in equality. His latest utterances proclaimed it to be a function of the state to promote equality among men no less than to protect liberty.

WILLIAM CLARK LARRABEE, A. M., LL. D.

BY WILLIAM H. LARRABEE, LL. D., CLASS OF '45.

(Born in Cape Elizabeth, Maine, December 22, 1802; a farmer's boy in youth, he prepared himself for and graduated (1828) from Bowdoin College; 1822, licensed to exhort, preached his first sermon and taught his first school; 1830, took charge of provisional school, changed into Wesleyan University in 1831; 1831-35, principal of Oneida Conference Seminary, Cazenovia, N. Y.; 1835-41, principal of Maine Wesleyan Seminary; 1841-52, professor in Indiana Asbury University and, 1848 acting president of same; 1852, editor of Ladies' Repository; 1852-54, first superintendent of Public Instruction for Indiana; 1856—, re-elected to same position; author of "Lectures on the Scientific Evidence of Natural and Revealed Religion," "Wesley and his Co-laborers," and "Rosabower: a collection of Essays and Miscellanies." Died, May 4, 1859.)

Studying with animated interest in every subject, Professor Larrabee acquired a thorough mastery of every branch, by virtue of which his teachings were perfectly clear. He would assist, with real, hearty interest any student who was in difficulty or puzzled. Plain, direct and familiar in his address to students, his manner was more that of a social equal than of the master of a class. His recitation room was like a place where all met on a level to talk the lesson over together. With his evident sympathy, occasionally introducing a humorous remark into the exercises, he rarely failed to make his pupils understand their lessons and feel encouraged. Prof. G. W. Hoss, after saying that he never knew a teacher who was so popular with his pupils, continues: "His influence in the recitation room was unbounded. Yet it was not the authority of position, nor the venerableness of years; it was the silent influence of confidence, friendship, and esteem. These qualities were mutual, originating in the teacher's heart, and like begetting like, they returned with an increase in both quantity and warmth." He made little show of the form of government, but no student took advantage of him, and he had few difficulties in discipline; but when occasion came, he could be stern and inflexible. He had a warm love for the beauties of nature and a highly refined literary taste; and was fond of classical quotations and allusions. He lacked the elements of an orator, but his sermons and addresses were noble in thought, chaste in style, frequently marked by emotion, and impressive. Depending upon his resources and the kindness of friends for everything, his sympathies went out through all his life to every one he saw struggling, and he would help them even at the cost of personal sacrifice and risk of embarrassment.

CHARLES GIBBS DOWNEY, A. M.

(Born in New Albany, Indiana. October 17, 1819; graduated from Wesleyan University in 1840; 1842-49, professor of Natural Science, Indiana Asbury University; 1849-52, professor of Chemistry and Pharmacy, Medical Department, same; 1852-57, professor of Mathematics, same. Died, October 9, 1857.)

Professor Downey, who devoted his entire manhood to Asbury University, was a man of purity and power. His life purpose is shown in a letter written while he was yet a student, in which he says: "I can see clearly that he who has so much loved us requires that we should receive his own image. I have plighted my vows to Heaven not to rest till I shall be such a creature here as He would have me be." How he fulfilled this is told by one who says, "During fourteen years of intimate association and almost daily companionship with him. I never heard him utter a word nor give evidence of a thought that would in the least disqualify him to appropriate the promise to the pure in heart. In charity, temperance, Sunday-school, and revival work, he acted upon the motto, Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might!"

As a teacher of science, Professor Downey possessed enthusiasm for experiment, observation, mechanical skill, and dexterity in manipulating apparatus. In the days of limited apparatus, his inventive skill compelled one piece to answer for a score; and when this could not avail, he constructed apparatus himself, one piece being a large reflecting telescope, which was used by the University for years.

His entire life was characterized by energy, exactness, integrity and devotion to principle. Many a man now looks back to college life and owns him as the source of his inspiration to higher attainments, intellectual and spiritual.

JOHN WHEELER, A. M., D. D.

BY THOMAS A. GOODWIN, D. D., CLASS OF '40.

(For items of life-work, see Alumnal Register.)

Dr. John Wheeler was a born educator. For two years before his graduation he gave promise of his future in the capacity of a successful tutor in the University which was to become a future field of professional work, to be transferred to more conspicuous positions in other universities. He was thorough and varied in his scholarship, courteous and painstaking in his methods as a teacher, and his pupils greatly loved and respected him. If he had gone into the ministry exclusively in early life, he would have ranked high as a preacher. As it was, he was among the best of his Conference and very acceptable, though he was best known and most esteemed as an educator. An Englishman by birth, an American by adoption, a Christian by change of heart, and an educator by profession, John Wheeler was a man to do good solid work in whatever department he might enter, and make good students of men willing to learn.

BENJAMIN F. TEFFT, D. D., LL. D.

BY HON. JOHN W. RAY, CLASS OF '48.

(Born in Floyd, New York, August 20, 1813; 1835, graduated from Wesleyan University; 1835-39, teacher in Maine Wesleyan Seminary; 1843-46, professor in Indiana Asbury University; 1846-51, editor of Ladies' Repository; 1851-54, president of Genessee College; 1854-66, in pastorate; 1861, chaplain of 1st Reg. Maine Cavalry; 1862, consul at Stockholm, Sweden; 1864, commissioner of immigration for State of Maine in Northern Europe; 1874, member of Maine Legislature; author of several books.)

Professor Tefft was a born teacher; being so born, he was an enthusiast; being an enthusiast, he was thorough; being such, he mastered the Greek language till it became like his mother tongue. He was a disciplinarian of no mean order. Thorough himself, his pupils must be likewise. No shamming, no flunking. Head and heart must be alive to the needs of the hour. Equally well was he regarded on the campus and on the street. His dignity became him. He never relaxed the pride that caused the students to respect him. This dignity harmoniously blended with the courtesy of a nobleman—a gentleman. No brusqueness marred his walk. He was one of God's nobleman. That was all. We boys knew that fact. Genial, given to full and free talk to every one in his class, with an earnest desire that his students should know all that the teacher could impart, no wonder that he was one of the most popular members of the faculty.

He taught Greek, but his words in the class-room, his Sabbath afternoon lectures, his high, manly course as a Christian, made his Greek accomplishments subordinate to his influence upon the hearts and heads of all his students, as well as upon all in contact with him.

In truth, there never was such a faculty! Simpson, Nutt, Larrabee, Wheeler, Tefft, Downey,—now all in Heaven! May their examples, words, and teachings bring all their boys home, to enjoy eternity with them and their Christ.

straight-forwardness. In the pulpit he was doctrinal, clear, earnest and free from eccentricities. As a presiding elder he was brotherly, wise and, in the traveling over his wide field of labor, truly heroic. As an editor he was conservative, safe, loyal to the church, promoting harmony, defining the legal status and in all respects defending the polity of the Methodist church. As an writer he was plain, direct, void of all affectation and ornamentation, and scholarly in taste.

On the Conference floor he was at his best. He was an unerring parlimentarian. He spoke upon all questions on the Conference floor, and in nine cases out of ten carried his point. He was adroit and alert as a fencer in debate, but always fair. He had a quiet humor, but no sarcasm nor irony. His was always the language of courtesy and conviction.

His Christian experience was even, quiet, normal, and of the dutiful type. Christianity in its strongest element was to him faithfulness in service. In friendship, he was companionable and gentlemanly, but not demonstrative. He was generous, unreserved and impartial. What he lacked in warmth, he made up in steadfastness. On the whole, he was one of the greatest characters of California Methodism, an honor to his Alma Mater, a leader among his ministerial brethren, an heroic and courageous pioneer, and was held in the highest esteem by the whole church. His distinguished services to California Methodism give him a lasting place of honor.

EDMUND E. E. BRAGDON, D. D.

BY SAMUEL A. LATTIMORE, PH. D., LL. D., CLASS OF '50.

(Born in Acton, Maine, December 8, 1812; 1841, graduated from Wesleyan University; 1842, a principal of Fulton Academy; 1846, principal of Mexicoville Academy; 1848, principal of Falley Seminary, Fulton, N. Y.; 1853-54, professor of Ancient Languages, Ohio University; 1854-58, professor of Latin, Indiana Asbury University; 1858-62, professor of Ancient Languages, Gennesee College. Died, March 20, in Lima, N. Y.)

The opening of the fall term of the year of 1854 was signalized in the history of the University by the accession to the faculty of several men of more than ordinary intellectual force and scholarly attainments.

One of these was Erastus E. Bragdon, who immediately after his graduation engaged in his chosen life-work of teaching. He rapidly rose to the principalship of Falley Seminary, where he not only distinguished himself by his remarkable executive abilities, but especially by his ability as a teacher of Latin. On the resignation of Dr. Wheeler from the professorship which he had held so long, Dr. Larrabee recommended his name to the Trustees and he was elected.

His personal appearance was impressive. His broad pale forehead, his inseparable spectacles, and his thoughtful face, grave almost to severity, gave him the dignity of age without a suggestion of abated manly vigor. He was really in the very prime of life. He entered upon his duties with a quiet but intense enthusiasm which was contagious. He astonished his classes alike by the minuteness of his knowledge and by the breadth of his scholarship. He was a thorough teacher.

As a preacher, his dignified bearing in the pulpit, his intense earnestness and solemnity of manner, and the resistless logic of his discourse, often rising to impassioned eloquence, could not fail to produce deep impression.

In the social and domestic circle the native kindliness of his heart was seen in its truest light. To know him was to love him, and deep was the regret of all when, after four years of service, he was called to the chair of Latin in Genesee College where he finished his mortal life.

BERNARD H. NADAL, D. D.

BY SAMUEL A. LATTIMORE, PH. D., LL. D., CLASS OF '50.

(Born in Talbott county, Maryland, March 2, 1813; learned a trade; 1835, entered Baltimore conference; 1848, graduated from Dickinson College; 1855-57, professor in Indiana Asbury University; 1857-67, in pastorate in Baltimore conference; 1867-70, professor in Drew Theological Seminary. Died, June 20, 1870.)

The chair of Belles Lettres and History was established in 1854 and Rev. Bernard H. Nadal, D. D. was the first professor. He entered upon the duties simultaneously with the new President, Dr. Daniel Curry, and Dr. Bragdon, professor of Latin, though previously unacquainted with either of them or any other member of the faculty.

Dr. Nadal had been educated at Dickinson College during the presidency of the famous Dr. McClintock. After graduation he entered the Baltimore Conference and served with distinction many of the more prominent city churches of that Conference. He came to the University without previous experience in teaching. In dress and address he appeared the cultured gentleman he really was. His genial and affable manner instantly won the affection of all he met. He seemed to live in a scholarly atmosphere and he inspired his students with a love of learning.

His whole temperament was sunny and, whether in the professor's chair, in the pulpit, or in the social circle, he seemed to radiate the warmth and brightness of his nature upon all about him. He soon became a favorite both with the faculty and students, and it was universally regretted that after three short years of brilliant service he decided to return to the pastorate in the conference from which he came.

He wrote on a wide range of subjects, successfully in each department. His style was pure, vigorous, and polished, and many of his essays were masterpieces. He was a regular contributor to the Methodist from its establishment until his death.

MILES J. FLETCHER, A. M.

(Born in Indianapolis, Indiana, in 1828; 1852, graduated from Brown University; 1852-54, and 1857-61, professor, 1861-62, professor emeritus, Indiana Asbury University; 1860, superintendent of Public Instruction for Indiana; special agent of Governor Morton at beginning of Civil War, meeting death in a railway accident, while on a mission to the front, May 10, 1862.)

Professor Fletcher had elements of popularity equalled by few. He was big-hearted and brave, tender and considerate to the down-trodden and poor, free and outspoken, and no one felt or feared that there was any dissimulation or concealment about him. He was the soul of honor and the type of generosity, and withal had an inexhaustible flow of spirits that gave fascination and charm to his society, and made him popular without an effort to be so. He was a prodigy of work, and he did his work so thoroughly and well that his friends were always taxing him with new burdens. He was no politician, and no other office in the gift of the state could have seduced him from his professorship; but he felt that in the capacity of superintendent of Public Instruction he could accomplish for the cause of education in the state at large more than he could in any other position. —From Biographical Sketches of Prominent Men of Indiana."

BENJAMIN T. HOYT, A. M.

BY JOHN R. MILLER, A. M., CLASS OF '68.

(Born in Boston, Massachusetts, October 18, 1820; 1846, graduated from Wesleyan University; 1846-48, principal of High school, Middletown, Conn.; 1848-56, principal of Lawrenceburg (Indiana) Institute; 1856-58, president of Indiana Female College, Indianapolis; 1858-67, professor in Indiana Asbury University. Died, 1867, in Greencastle, Indiana.)

Professor Hoyt was among the ablest of the many able men who have filled the professional chairs of DePauw University, either in its earlier years or later history. Coming from New England, he brought with him its culture, its staidness, and something of its formalism, into the more free and breezy atmosphere of western life, and impressed himself upon all who were brought within the circle of his influence as a strong and sincere man of excellent ability and high attainments, whose motives were pure, and whose ideals were of the highest. He was polished and elegant in manner and address, punctilious in his observance of all the proprieties of life, with a refined nature, free from ostentation or touch of coarseness. His intellect was keen and brilliant, rather than ponderous,—his weapon was not the bludgeon, but the sharp and piercing rapier. He was somewhat reserved in his manner, not a man to mix freely with the crowd upon the street, but those who gained an entrance into the inner citadel of his life found a warm, genial and sympathetic nature. His reserve was largely due to education and training and not lack of sympathy or generous impulse. He was kindly and wise in instruction and counsel, and true and loyal to his conviction of right and duty. His fine culture was not only of the intellect, but of manner and heart, and his sternest reproofs—and there was an element of sternness in his, as in all strong natures—were always tempered with the gracious courtesy of the true gentleman.

With Professor Hoyt, deep learning, wide reading, and gentle culture were the adornments of a strong personality, a healthy, manly nature, to which were added the ennobling graces of a Christian character.

PHILANDER WILEY, D. D.

Doctor Philander Wiley was the son of the distinguished pioneer preacher, Rev. Allan Wiley, who might be designated as one of the founders of Asbury University. He was not distinguished for an eloquent delivery in preaching. His manner was quiet and his sermons were didactic rather than hortatory. He was clear and scriptural.

During his connection with the University, he took a deep interest in the lives of his students and was always prompt in his expressions of sympathy in any of their troubles and ready to lend a helping hand to those who were in emergencies. It was largely through him that the first Japanese students came to the University and he and Mrs. Wiley were especially attentive to them and exercised over them a parental watchcare and affection.

The social nature of Doctor Wiley made him a splendid companion and friend to the students under his care, and he made very strong and deep attachments to those who were partial to the work in his department. Many influential men were induced to take a deeper interest in the University on account of his influence. His unusually long period of service gave him great prominence in the educational work of the state. During his professorship, the Greek department was enriched with valuable books and statuary. His recitation room was the first in the college to be handsomely decorated and furnished. Not many educators have impressed more lives with enduring benefits than Doctor Wiley.

JOHN W. LOCKE, D. D.

BY JOHN POUCHER, D. D., CLASS OF '65.

(Born, February 12, 1822, in Paris, Kentucky; 1842, graduated from Augusta College; 1843, joined the Ohio conference; 1850, transferred to the Indiana conference; 1853, president of Brookville College; 1860-72, professor in Indiana Asbury University; 1872-74, in pastorate; 1874-78, president of McKendree College; 1878-96, in pastorate; member of five General conferences and the Centennial conference, at Baltimore. Died, December, 1896, in Fairfield, Illinois.)

Being himself of sturdy blood, the eighth in a continuous line of preachers, with a mother of most fragrant memory, Dr. Locke insisted that his pupils should stand firmly on their feet, and be clear and precise. A kind but careful critic, he would not permit an error to escape correction, but he made it easy for a student to acquit himself creditably. His influence in the college life of the time was such as to be coveted, being perhaps next to that of the president, and when a vacancy in that office occurred, there was lacking but one vote for his election.

His department was well managed. He was witty and mirth-loving, but his pleasantries were never stale nor affected. Recitation work was never neglected and decorum was maintained. Students in his classes knew what to depend upon. Though an experienced and model teacher, he frequently expressed a hankering desire to engage in ministerial work, and while still in the faculty he served for a time as an acceptable pastor of prominent churches.

His scholarship, his exactness of thought, geniality of expression, and generous disposition always made him a favorite in every community where he did service, whether in the pulpit or along educational lines. As a master of good English, his address was plain, direct, forcible and effective. His lectures in the old College Chapel have left a permanent impression.

LEWIS L. ROGERS, A. M., Ph. D.

BY THOMAS J. BASSETT, A. M., PH. D., CLASS OF '75.

(For items of life-work, see Alumnal Register.)

Professor Rogers was below the ordinary size, well-built, active and strong. He was quick, but graceful in manner, handsome of feature, with a sharp black eye which nothing in his class-room ever escaped. In address and manner, he was affable and pleasant, but always maintained a dignity which seemed to comport with his position. A fluent and pleasant conversationalist, he made a most favorable impression upon all whom he met; but upon the lecture platform he was nervous, ill at ease, and never at his best.

As a scholar, his field of research was not broad nor as deep as those of some of his fellows, but he was facile and painstaking. In his field of Latin he never tripped nor was caught napping. As a teacher, he had few equals. Always thoroughly prepared himself, he expected each student to do his best. With all who tried to do so, he was patient and kind, but woe betide the luckless Freshman who tried to shirk or cheat. He was not a driver, but inspired each to his best endeavor. A Kentuckian by birth, he was by nature impulsive and quick-tempered, but was usually self-possessed and calm. He never spoke of order, yet each student knew that order was the unwritten law, and gave the most respectful attention. By his students he was held in the highest esteem, not only as a teacher but as a man and a friend, and there was universal regret among them when he resigned his position to enter commercial pursuits.

JOHN E. EARP, Ph. D., D. D.

(Born in Marion, Illinois, April 12, 1846; graduated from McKendree College in 1865; 1867-69, student in Universities of Tubingen and Berlin; 1873, studied German and French in Europe; 1869-83, professor in Asbury DePauw University; 1886-90, president of Southwest Kansas College; 1890-96, pastor in Southwest Kansas conference; 1896, transferred to North Indiana conference. Died, May 10, 1897.)

During his whole life Doctor Earp was a diligent student. As a young boy he attracted attention on account of his eagerness in the pursuit of knowledge. He was graduated at the age of nineteen and became ambitious to achieve the highest rank in scholarship.

He was a man of great thrift and enterprise in secular affairs. In the re-organization of the University, in 1884, his services were highly appreciated by Mr. DePauw. He was treasurer of the faculty and rendered very important service in the direction of the new buildings. He showed great skill in the organization of Southwest Kansas College and might have achieved eminent success had he continued in the educational work. During his residence in Winfield, Kansas, he became greatly impressed with the importance of evangelistic effort and re-entered the ministry, serving various churches with acceptability. In the pastorate he was very successful. He was able to take a comprehensive view of the work, while at the same time looking carefully after its minutest details. He kept himself fully abreast of the times by a close study of men as well as of books.

PATTERSON McNUTT, A. M., D. D.

BY THOMAS J. BASSETT, A. M., PH. D., CLASS OF '75.

(For items of life-work, see Alumnal Register.)

Professor McNutt was a man of very strongly marked personality. He was a broad and ripe scholar for the opportunities of his generation. No student ever dreamed that "Paddy," as he was familiarly and loving nick-named, was not a perfect master of the science of Mathematics. In literature, in languages, and in philosophy, he was also well versed. As a teacher, he was not eminently successful, his great weakness growing out of his loving, trusting, large-heartedness. Every true student made rapid progress, but those who desired to shirk and idle away their time could get along and pass with but little knowledge of the subject. All his students loved him, but some took advantage of his kindly disposition.

In public addresses his manner was not pleasing, but as a speaker he was clear, logical and eloquent. His sermons were full of love and of Holy Ghost power, and reached the heart as well as the intellect. No student, whatever his character, ever went to him for a favor and was turned away. His great heart was always overflowing with sympathy and love. He was generous to a fault, "giving to every one who asked of him," often beyond his means.

He was distinguished for ardent patriotism as well as enlightened piety. When in the service of his country, to many a suffering soldier he carried both a cup of cold water and the message of heavenly mercy. From exposure on the march, the picket-line and battle-field, his health became greatly impaired and his later years were a constant struggle against ill-health. He was a consecrated Christian, loved God with all his heart, and every man more than himself; and every one who knew him can say, as Hamlet of his father, "Take him all in all, he was a man. I shall never see his like again."

II. BOARDS OF INSTRUCTION.

It is the object of the following lists to preserve for historical reference the names and times of service of those who have filled the various chairs of instruction in the University from its founding to the present time. As in the case of the Joint Board, the officers of the Faculty are given first, the Professors and instructors afterwards, each group in the order of original appointment to that rank. For the present Faculty of the University, refer to the current year book.
